Unpatriotic Newspapers

Reveal Military Plans to Get Sensational Scoops to Catch a Street Sale

"Much of the war matter that is printed today can be thrown into the waste basket with a good deal of George Greer, chairman of the committee on news, in an address before the Ohio City writers' association.

The starting is prized above the informative, and matters of vital importance to the people, because they catch 'punch', are covered out entirely, or else given modest space on the market page.

The exclusive story has in no way lost its value and there are still those papers that, for the brief triumph of a scoop, are willing to endanger the lives of troops, reveal military plans and spread the poison of the morale of the people.

The announcement of the arrival of our 8th, transportation, France, even while others were still in the danger zone, made the 8th the subject of a telegraph operator. The cruel lie that our troops were attacked by the Germans and that four of our July announcements were utterly untrue, was the work of a correspondent in search of a 'story' and a British crew who suffered from a ship and a liar and expelled him from the fleet."

A Purely Vegetable Pill.—The chief ingredients of this new, reliable, vegetable pill are mandarin and dandelion, which are perfectly harmless in their action. They cleanse and purify and have a most beneficial effect upon the secretions of the digestive organs. The despicable and all who suffer from indigestion and kidney ailments will find in these pills the most effective medicine. Concentrated form that has yet been offered to the suffering.

Belgian War Dog

Twice Wounded by Shrapnel, But Never Once Deserted

Nellie, celebrated war dog, brought to this country by the Belgian, Dr. D. C. the passing of a number of the British would cause more grief among them.

At the first battle of Ypres Nellie trotted along beside her owner, a British officer, into the rain of shrapnel and high explosives, and was the only thought of being near her master. He fell, but she never flinched, wandered about No Man's Land until picked up by Major O'Brien of the British 1st Regiment of Guides.

Nellie lived with the Belgian regiment in the trenches for many months, always going "over the top." Twice she was wounded by shrapnel, but she never deserted. When Major O'Brien was killed, she went to the front with the Belgian army. Nellie came back with thousands of Americans have seen her twirling eyes and her soldier's still. Death was due probably to a combination of wounds and age, but she always was remembered by her comrades as a real heroine.

THOSE AWFUL CRAMPS

Suggestions that may save Much Suffering

Maryville, Pa.—"For twelve years I suffered with terrible cramps. I was unable to walk, and in bad several days every night I was troubled with all kinds of cramps. I was treated by doctors, but failed to find relief. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others. I tried it and I found it was a different woman. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly and I am recommending it to my friends and neighbors."

—Mrs. GEORGE R. NATION, Box 72, Maryville, Pa.

Young women who are troubled with painful irregular periods, headache, dizziness, dragging down of the womb, nervousness or indigestion should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this old and tried remedy.

An Overlooked Little People

The Inhabitants of Letonia Are Now War Refugees

The Lettish people have been great sufferers from the war. Letonia was a rich country, and the great ports of Riga, Windau and Libau were responsible for 800 per cent. of Russia's pre-war exports and the great part of her imports. Courland, the richest province of Letonia, is now occupied by the Germans and two-thirds of the inhabitants are refugees. Riga, with its population of over 600,000, is half of its inhabitants, and the same is true of the other regions of the Divina. There are now 800,000 Lettish refugees, forming the highest percentage of refugees in this war, as the total number of Letts in the world does not amount to more than 3,000,000. The German invasions have involved the loss of the entire property of the people.—London Graphic.

Ask for Frozen Fish

Prejudice Against It Is Due to Improper Handling in Homes

The food controller, through the fish committee of his office, is endeavoring to encourage increased use of Canada's frozen fish. This effort is part of the larger campaign to increase consumption of all kinds of fish in order to release surplus stocks and other means for export to the Allies.

An increased demand for frozen fish would result in the increased market price of an abundant supply available. Many people have a prejudice against frozen fish, simply because they do not understand the proper methods of handling. What ever have been the practice in the past, the present method of freezing fish shortly after they are caught prevents deterioration and the fish is delivered to the consumer in an ideal condition.

To prepare frozen fish for cooking it should be put in cold water and left there for several hours in order that frost may be entirely thawed from it. It will then be in practical condition for cooking. If it is frozen, many people make the mistake of pouring hot, or even boiling water, on frozen fish in order to thaw it. This has the result of making the fish tasteless and leaving the fish in a flabby condition which makes it undesirable for cooking.

Carmen's Messenger

—BY—
HAROLD BIRDLOSS

WIND, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
LONDON, MANCHESTER AND LIVERPOOL

By and by he went to the smoking room and lighting a cigarette, thought over what Carmen had said to him. At first she had seemed anxious to find out something about Featherstone, but he was not surprised by this. Carmen liked to know as much as possible about everybody she met, and used her knowledge cleverly when it was to her advantage. The other matter was more puzzling and he wondered why she wanted to send a packet secretly to a man as old as her father. It might, of course, be a bribe, because girls were fond of mystery, but as a girl of Carmen's age, a practical object for what she did. She had stated that he had been in England, and this might mean that she had a lover. Perhaps she had exaggerated his age, and in any case, Foster thought it would not be a great drawback to the man who was powerful and rich. Carmen was rather ambitious than romantic in her business, and he felt no jealousy. He liked Carmen and had no doubts for her abilities, but thought he would sooner not marry her, even if she were willing, which was most improbable. Since he had promised to take the packet, he would do it, and say nothing about the matter. He felt the half early, and driving home found his pocket sitting on the stove.

"Was Day at the reunion?" Featherstone asked.
Foster said he was there, and Featherstone resumed thoughtfully. "I'm curious he hasn't come to the will yet, but if he can't turn up before Thursday, he'll be too late. I'll be ready to start on my way to the afternoon train, and as there's no sign in spelling a good plan for a few dollars, I'll buy a ticket and check my baggage to Ottawa. Then I'll get off at Stratford. Carmen says we haven't long to wait if the west-bound train on time. You can express my things on from Ottawa. The Montreal express stops about an hour."

"That ought to throw Day off the track," Foster agreed, as they talked about something else.

IV

The First Adventure

It was about ten o'clock at night and the Montreal express sped through the lonely forests of Northern Ontario. The train was light, for there were few passengers on board, and the road was by no means good, but in spite of the jolting Foster enjoyed his cigarette in a corner of the smoking compartment at the end of a car. A colored porter told him his berth in the sleeper was ready. Featherstone went to the train, and most of the passengers were already in bed, but Foster did not want to follow them just yet. For a time he had done with business, and was on his way to bed. He reflected the unusual sense of freedom.

A half moon shone down upon the rugged wilderness, and he could see the black pines rising like sentinels on either side. He was not lured and he heard the car, locomotive and the wheels on the rails. Now and then there was a roar as the train sped across a bridge, and water glistened among the rocks. As he approached the road sank into a steady clatter and a soothing thrum of wheels. The car was warm, and Foster, who had given the porter his overcoat, was lighter another cigarette when a man came in and sat down opposite. He looked hard at Foster, who quietly returned his gaze. The man was about his own height but some years older, and his expression was disturbed.

Foster felt interested. He had faced danger in the northern wilderness, where he had risked starvation and travelled on foot when the ice was breaking up. Besides he had once been in a fight involved in savage fights about disputed mining claims, and he had been struck but was not hurt. He thought the stranger was afraid but was not sure.

"You're going to Ottawa, aren't you? I heard you were going to your friend," said the man.
"I'm going to Montreal, but don't see what that has to do with you."

The other made a sign of impatience. "Well, I dare say you can be trusted, and I've got to take a risk."

"It is a risk to trust a man I don't know," Foster rejoined. "But how can I help?"

"I want you to put on my coat and cap and stay here, reading the Witness, for about ten minutes."

"Holding the newspaper in front of my face, I suppose? Well, I'm rather an unusual request, and I must know a little more. If there's a detective on your trail and you expect me to hold his attention while you hide or try to jump off the train, must refuse."

The stranger smiled. "I've wired for the police to meet me at Ottawa, the trouble is that I mayn't get there. Time won't allow of a long explanation, but there are some on board who'd stop at nothing to prevent my arrival. In fact, to some extent, I've settled my life in your hands."

Foster looked at him, surprised. He had not expected an adventure of this kind on a Canadian Pacific train, but did not think the other was exaggerating.

"How many men?" he asked.
"Five seen one, but know three more."

"Then why not tell the conductor and have the train searched?"
"I wouldn't work. I might find one enemy, but I'd warn the others. I wouldn't my name, and I don't think I'd not a danger is the best chance I have. The conductor's making his way up the train and I'm going to see if he can get into the express car. It's the only safe place, the clerks are armed. Well, my business is laid out and the public interest and I take you for a patriotic citizen."

Foster saw that he must decide quickly. Somehow he did not doubt the man, who kept his eyes on the door as if he expected somebody to come in. Moreover, he expected to be met by the police at Ottawa.

"If I look as if I'm run your risk, I'll put on my coat and cap. The porter's sweeping up the car, and if you keep the door open, I'll come back. Give me five minutes, and then, if I don't turn up and you find the newspaper, drop it."

"Very well," said Foster. "I'll drop the paper, but the newspaper, drop it. The stranger gave him his heavy coat, and told him to wait at Ottawa. You're going to Montreal. What's your name?"

Foster told him and he resumed: "Then, if you don't see me, stop at the hotel, and I'll be there in a day or two. You'll be repaid for any expense of convenience. Well, I'm going. Thanks!"

"Good luck!" said Foster, who had heard and agreed the stranger. Now he was alone, he began to wonder if he had been imposed upon. The stranger had not been like a criminal; though alarmed, he had an air of quiet authority. He seemed absurd that he should think himself in danger. Violence was not common in Canada, where the carrying of weapons was prohibited, and Foster had never heard of any sensational crime on the big express. He was, though, not without good cause.

No. 7—CANDY

Candy is a luxury rather than a necessity of life but it is a luxury that has received such indulgence in this continent that it has become a serious and profitable business. It is not that candy is needed overseas in any great quantity, but the sugar that goes into the manufacture of candy is.

The Canadian who continues to indulge freely in the use of candy which he knows to be made from cane sugar should be filled with remorse, for he is simply depriving people who are already hungry, of the sugar which they need to keep up their strength and give them energy to fight and work.

Sugar in moderate quantities is absolutely necessary to keep the spark of life burning in the human frame. It furnishes heat and energy. It is necessary for the men who are fighting. It is even more necessary for that portion of the civilian population in Europe which is now in actual want.

In England and France it is served in restaurants in tiny packages. A little bit of syrup is frequently substituted entirely for sugar. Candy is a thing of the past. Yet in our Canada and the United States go on in our reckless use of sweets and confections while people in Europe suffer for lack of their physical well-being. The money spent for candy in the United States and Canada in the past year is double the amount of money needed to keep the Canadian supplied with food for a year.

There is no necessity for giving up the use of candy altogether, but there is a crying need for a radical change in the varieties manufactured. Chocolate is the best kind to buy at present and there are many varieties of candy which might be made by the skilful combination of fruits, nuts and cream. Children should be taught to discriminate in the kind of sweets they buy.

The varieties usually sold at the village store are apt to be "sugar candy" in the worst sense of the word.

Fully 25 per cent. of the sugar refined in Canada goes toward the manufacture of sweets, confectionery, biscuits and other luxuries.

If France's 15 per cent. of sugar a month is to be maintained—England is still to have its 2 per cent. of sugar for each person, Canada must reduce her present per capita consumption of 17 pounds a month. Mr. Hoover's message to the United States might equally well be applied to Canada. He says: "Statements that there have been, or will be, ample supplies of sugar available are wrong and opposed to every fact in the situation. It is our stern duty to feed the Allies, to maintain their health and strength at any cost to ourselves. There has not been, nor will be, an unusual supply for even their present meagre and depressing ration unless they send ships to remote markets for it. It is, however, the American public will diminish their sugar consumption by ten per cent. to fifteen per cent., or if the Cuban crops are larger than we anticipate, the dispatch of transport necessary can be avoided."

What Women Want to Know

Some Queries and Answers Regarding Conservation of Food

Mary. You don't have to give up all idea of making marmalade, but have you heard anything about the sugarless marmalade? Is this the reason for making this preserve why not give them a trial? Let the fruits supply the sugar. To one cup of ground seed raisins add one cup chopped apples and one cup water. Cook until thickened. A lemon juice and grated rind give an agreeable flavoring. Cooked dried fruit, such as apricots, peaches or apricots, can be used in combination with the ground raisins in any proportion desired and three fruits may be combined—such as apricots, apples and raisins. Candy added to the marmalade makes a simple preserve and very wholesome. Wash one pound prunes and one-half pound apricots, cook over night, stew until very soft in same water. Rub through colander, return to a pan and cook slowly until thick, being careful that it does not burn. Do not add sugar. Try Scotch orange marmalade, too. It is excellent.

It is a very big question. Certainly, a country like Canada who is putting her production of substitutes if it is to be avoided and a heavy responsibility to do our utmost, where our arms or in city cultivation, rests upon all of us. The Housewife. "What can I do to help?" you ask. Listen to what the food controller says: "If you are a housewife, you can study the situation insofar as it affects your own life. You can economize in the use of wheat, beef, bacon, sugar and fat, and use substitutes for wheat and meat. You can take a greater interest in your marketing. You can encourage the men to cultivate and to do their utmost in their campaign for increased food production. And to the farmer in particular he says: You can put all your effort into the vital work of production. The demands on you are great and you have your difficulties make them known to business men and others in your locality so that they will feel their responsibility and jointly you can work for greater production. Get in touch with your provincial and Dominion departments of agriculture and take the best use of the information and experience of others. Plan well."

Betty Brown. If you live on the farm and want to do something really useful this year why not go in for poultry-raising, gardening, or even keeping a pig? Perhaps the latter idea doesn't appeal to you much but you certainly cannot do

Save Food

In a time needing food economy many people are not getting all the nourishment they might from their food.

It is not how much you eat, but how much you assimilate, that does you good.

The addition of a small teaspoonful of Bovril to the diet as a peptogenic before meals leads to more thorough digestion and assimilation and you thus save food, for you need less.

down in England for daily necessities of life. There is no mistaking that message is there, Mrs. R.S.A. When you ask if the same will apply to Canada you are putting a pretty big question. Certainly, a country like Canada who is putting her production of substitutes if it is to be avoided and a heavy responsibility to do our utmost, where our arms or in city cultivation, rests upon all of us.

anything more useful. Numbers of you have a good poultry-raising pleasure and profitable. And of course the man or the woman who manages the laying flock should not only be concentrated upon present production, but improvements in the methods of increasing future production. Improvements in hens necessitate a close study of the individual, for it is the individual which makes the average, and a few poor birds greatly reduce the average of the good ones.

Improvements in Egg Production

A Few Poor Birds Greatly Reduce the Average of the Good Ones

The efforts of the poultrymen in managing the laying flock should not only be concentrated upon present production, but improvements in the methods of increasing future production. Improvements in hens necessitate a close study of the individual, for it is the individual which makes the average, and a few poor birds greatly reduce the average of the good ones. In a flock of 100 hens it will be found that on the average 10 to 30 per cent. rarely lay an egg during the profitable months of the year, and another small percentage may be barren, while the remainder are fairly good layers. The only way is to weed out the poor layers and keep only the best. It often pays better to take one egg from a flock of one hundred and fifty, after which, with less labor, one can get nearly as many eggs and a much more profitable yield per bird.

Where the selection is not made, the poor birds are fed at the expense of the better ones. Improvement can come largely through the union of two factors: (1) Right selection at the end of the pullet year, and (2) By producing relatively early hatches and selecting rigidly throughout the season, keeping only the best youngsters for future production.

How to Avoid a Cold

The idea is to make every muscle of the body tense. The hands can be kept straight and the elbows the muscles perfectly rigid. Every muscle of the body should be tense, and in that condition you will soon find that you are breathing hard, and that your breath is taken the whole circulation is stimulated. It is possible to sit still, and at the same time have the muscles working as hard as though one were running to catch a train.

If we would remember these things when we feel a chill or a draft we have the word of our physician that we need not fear a cold.—Regina Leader

"Stonewall" Jackson was not a man to speak ill of another man without reason. At a council of generals early in the war, only in England, Rev. George Wainwright, rector of Knudsall, Suffolk, was charged with being in possession of a sack of sugar contrary to the food control order.

Defendant's motion broke down and it was found to contain a sack of sugar obtained from a local grocery. Defendant, who pleaded that he was unaware of the control order, was fined $15 and costs. The local grocer was fined $25 for supplying the sugar.

MANY a farmer has been bunched into selling his stock and produce at a ridiculous figure following the blue-ruin stories of the speculative buyer or his agent. The farmer was NOT in touch with the market; the speculator WAS.

The world's market is the farmer's market. Keep in touch with it. The Herald's market reports are not only good—they are the best obtainable, and include special and exclusive features such as Poole's X-ray and forecast on the world's livestock situation. Poole is nothing short of a genius and is accepted as an authority the world over. Our Boston Letter on the world markets is up-to-the-minute and covers all colonial and foreign markets. It is the only one published in Western Canada. The Herald's expert survey of local grain and livestock markets is drawn from actual contact with buyers and sellers and our special reports covering every commodity that the farmer sells or purchases are compiled from accurate and reliable data.

A Truck for the Farmer

FARM equipment which will effect a time and labor-saving, and therefore a money-saving, must be carefully considered by every good farmer now-a-days.

The farm wagon, which for years was the most useful of all farm equipment, is now being replaced by the best farms by a sturdy, dependable motor truck. The truck will haul any farm product—fruit, grain, vegetables, stock, fertilizer, or wood—around the farm, or to the town or city many miles distant, in half the time, and at a much lower cost.

The Ford One-Ton truck is a rapid, economical and very serviceable means of transport. One of these on your farm will save you weeks of time in a single season and will enable you to pass through a crisis of labor shortage with less difficulty.

The Ford truck is supplied as a chassis only. This permits you to select any of the many body styles especially designed for the Ford truck and already on the market. Thus you can mount the one which suits your individual requirements.

Price $750 f.o.b. Ford, Ont.
